ABSTRACT

A storage device that is detachably attachable to an information processing apparatus, comprises an IC chip; a first control unit extracting a control command for the IC chip included in a control command for the storage device from the information processing apparatus; and a second control unit performing interface conversion corresponding to the IC chip on the control command for the IC chip extracted by the first control unit and giving the converted control command to the IC chip.